

Common periwinkle look alike

Common periwinkle looks similar to the invasive winter creeper (Euonymus fortunei) but differs in possessing milky sap, leaves with entire margins, and showy bluish flowers.

Flowers (left) and leaves (right) of winter creeper.

© James H. Miller, USDA Forest Service, Bugwood.org